

Chalice – Lancashire type D1. (?) (Webb)

An exceptionally rare piece to show you. It is a 17th century chalice with a large ball midway down the stem. A lovely form. The small cup resting on a large ball, standing on a nicely balanced base. A form that I find aesthetically very beautiful. The base is engraved with a small cross and is finely turned underneath.

Circa 1640-50. Height 5 5/8". The base 4 1/8" diameter.

Michael Kashden writes on 2.11.15

These 17th century chalices are extremely rare. It occurred to me recently that they must be rarer than flat lid tankards, Beefeaters, James 1st flagons and porringers. I am so pleased to have discovered one.

