Swiss flagons and tankards - some notes.

Bauch flagons (Bauchkanne).

From Bauch = "gut" or abdomen.
Also known as Wallis Wine Flagons.
Squat, round main body on raised, "concave-on-convex" foot ring.
Tall neck with a band half way up.
Wide, funnel like top with formed spout.
Flat, heart shaped lid (French style);
small flagons often without finial but with double acorn on wedge thumb piece, medium size sometimes with dolphin or ram's head finial and double acorn thumb piece, large size often with ram's head finial and double ram's head thumb piece and with a pewter chain from two knobs.
Strap handle. Marks on lid.

Stize Flagons

Mostly flared barrels similar to Strasbourg/Württemberg styles.

Marks normally on handle.

Type I - Schnabelstize:

Schnabel = beak suggests the name of this spouted flagon.

Mostly Germanic spouts with double facets but single faceted or smoothly curved spouts not uncommon.

Invariably a single dome lid to hold heart shaped spout cover, sometimes with an upturned "nib", with or without finial.

Zürich/Basel types mostly with finials.

Mostly Chair thumb piece with "turned" top ridge and a similar "turned" feature at the handle terminal. Feather thumb piece not uncommon on all Stizen.

Strap handle.

Midriff banding uncommon.

Type II - Stize:

Formed spout and flat, heart shaped lid sometimes with a protruding "dent" as a finial or with a central dome holding a cast finial. Other features are similar to the Schnabelstize.
Midriff banding uncommon.

Production areas and makers: see Type I.

Type III - Bartmannstize:

Bart = beard and the name "Bearded Man Flagon"
was given to these flagons with a relief cast
spout in the shape of a man's head.

Straight sided, tapering barrel up to a band, some 2/3 up the barrel and from there cylindrical up to the lid. (Looks like an acoustic loud hailer.) Other features as per I and II above.
Solothurnstizen too have almost straight sided barrels but all the way to the lid. tapering

Prismen flagons (Prismenkannen)

Six or eight- sided flagons with hexagonal hinge-lidded spout and screw top lid with carrying ring. Octagonal types rare. Also known as "Screw-top flagons" (Schraubenkannen). Both Glocken and Prismen types made without spouts (bottles). Screw-on spout lid with safety chain not uncommon.

Often well engraved. Marks on spout lid.

Three barrel shapes can be observed;

1. Without a foot.

2. With a small, flared foot.

3. "Kranzkanne" or wreath flagons flare out towards a relief cast foot.

Bern flagons

Type I - Kürbiskanne

Kürbis = gourd (or pumpkin)

Circular body on a raised, sometimes square-sided foot. Tall, often slender neck with or without banding ending in a funnel like wide rim with a shaped spout. French style heart shaped lid. Often the characteristic "question mark" handle. Often plain, chair back thumb pieces. Marks on lid.

Common in; Town, area, mark

Bern flagons

Type II - Stegkanne

Steg means foot bridge or landing stage.
Made in two sizes only; full measure of 180 cl and half of 90 cl.

Closely related to the Kürbiskanne but the lid is domed with a finial and the thumb pieces are usually better, feather types common. The "steg" often in the shape of a hand holding on to the long spout. Handles are "question mark" type and the Rudolf family of Zofingen included a "slip-hook" on the inside of their handles (from c.1650-1800!)
Marks on lid.

This type also found in Bavaria (Ulm).

Humpen

Cylindrical on a flared foot, single, or more often double dome lid with often pine cone finial. Strap handle with feather or chair back thumb piece. A slight downward taper common (very similar to the squat Richard Pitts spire flagon). Some Zürich examples taper the other way. Often richly engraved and also carry "extra" decorative features. 17th Century types with slightly flared sides and no easy to confuse with the Tirol/Bavarian types of the same period. Marks on lid, handle or underneath.
